SHORT PROFILE

EDGE Worldwide is a registered Australian charity working alongside Cambodian educators, schools and communities. Its work includes education, mentoring, student wellbeing and teacher development. Its history includes the development of Phum Ou Community School and Vocational Training Centre near Siem Reap. Current work includes support for Kep Gardens and the development of an Education and Pastoral Care Hub model shaped by local needs.

Standard profile

CHARITY PROFILE

EDGE Worldwide is a registered Australian charity supporting education and community development in Cambodia. It works with local educators, families and community leaders to understand what is needed and build on the knowledge and initiatives already in place.

A defining early project was Phum Ou Community School and Vocational Training Centre near Siem Reap. Working with local educator Sarath Proeun and the community, EDGE helped fund, build and develop the school. That experience continues to shape its approach.

Today, EDGE's work spans learning support, mentoring, teacher development, student wellbeing and individual education pathways. It maintains an ongoing partnership with Kep Gardens in southern Cambodia and is developing an Education and Pastoral Care Hub model. The model brings together learning, digital access, pastoral care and community support according to local needs. EDGE also helps communities respond to urgent needs, including support for families displaced by the border conflict.

Phum Ou legacy

Phum Ou is a defining chapter in EDGE's history. The project grew from Sarath Proeun's ambition to create educational opportunities in his community outside Siem Reap and his partnership with Jamie Christopherson.

The school began with around 25 students learning in converted cow sheds while a purpose-built site was planned. In 2014, work developed into Phum Ou Community School and Vocational Training Centre. EDGE helped secure international support and funding, working with Sarath, community leaders, families, educators and local monasteries to build and develop the school.

Its programmes extended beyond English classes to literacy, digital skills, vocational training and teacher development. The

Kep Gardens partnership

PARTNERSHIP

EDGE maintains an ongoing relationship with Kep Gardens, a community education organisation in southern Cambodia. Support includes funding, practical resources and educational development in response to locally identified needs.

EDGE helped fund and support a dedicated Pastoral Care Centre. The centre provides space for counselling, health and dental screenings, safeguarding and crisis support. It also offers a setting for conversations with students and parents, creative activities and additional student support. The centre is relatively new and continues to develop in response to community needs.

Education and Pastoral Care Hub initiative

HUB MODEL

EDGE is developing a flexible Hub model with local schools and communities. It is designed to bring education, digital access, mentoring, pastoral care and teacher development together in a locally based space.

The scope of each proposed Hub is shaped by the community's priorities. A project may involve adapting an existing space or establishing a new one. Depending on local needs and available partnerships, it may also provide access to visiting health professionals and community services.

Community support during displacement

BORDER RESPONSE

During Cambodia's border conflict, communities in Kep and Kampot collected supplies for displaced families in the north.

EDGE helped coordinate volunteers, information and transport, and delivered practical support including medical and hygiene supplies, everyday essentials and learning materials.

Local teachers were already creating temporary classrooms in shelters. EDGE provided resources to support their work, including educational and play materials to help children continue learning and retain familiar routines.
